

'Does everyone get to steer the steering group?

HOME: HOusing instability for people with a learning disability in NENC: understanding systeMs through knowledge Equality'

Simon Hackett, NIHR Senior Clinical Lecturer in Applied Mental Health Research, Population Health Sciences Institute, Newcastle University

A decorative graphic element located in the bottom left corner of the slide. It consists of several overlapping circles in red, white, and blue colors, creating a network-like appearance.

Knowledge equality examines processes in social and organisational contexts where different forms of knowledge, for example, service-user, clinical, experiential or policy knowledge, intersect and are assigned different values. Interactions inside and between various groups' raise questions about the influence of knowledge equality and knowledge inequality on a whole housing system. This understanding can be applied to personal need and changes in needs across the lifespan, support and care, tenancy arrangements, home ownership, homelessness, financial budgetary constraints and incentives and disincentives within the system. For example, there are inequalities in the housing system that compound issues for a particular section of people who are unable to apply for suitable housing due to their benefit eligibility. Housing instability has been identified regionally and nationally as perpetuating health inequalities and a number of negative outcomes for people who have an intellectual disability, for example, longer stays in hospital and out-of-area placements.

Jargon Buzzers

Leading and doing the research

Communicards

Challenging the way we talk about things

So, Housing Instability became Housing Not At Its Best

The Lawnmowers Theatre Company Research support group video for HOME project:

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=kKaLTFhGfaM>

Housing not at its best, if you would like to join a focus group please contact us...

Simon.hackett@newcastle.ac.uk

The Lawnmowers

lawnmowerstheatre.com